TO BE USED TO AID SCOUT MOVEMENT

Throughout Country to Increase Councils.

The executive committee of the Boy Scouts of America is planning to put five traveling secretaries in the field this fall. These men, who have shown torpedo flotilla, will defend New York city and its approaches from an invading fleet. The remainder will see service with the "hostile" aggregation.

There was gathered in Gardiners bay today the Macla, manned by Connecticul reserves; Tonopah and Vixen, with New Jersey's pride on board; the Isle de Cuba, from Maryland; the Rodgers and Alleen, from Rhode Island, and the Without Chicago from Rhode Island, and the Countries and also the extension of the local councils and towns studying the scout councils and the extension of the scout movement. iast year and a half the organization of patrols and troops throughout the country has gone on so rapidly that no more than a formal supervision of them by the national headquarters has been possible. The requests of boys to become scouts, applications for information regarding the Scout work and the appointment of Scout masters kept the staff in the headquarters busy up to January 1. In addition the great growth of the organization demanded many things. At the time that James E. West became executive secretary, the board realized the necessity of a new manual, new scout activities, new badges, a national court of honor to award badges for heroic deeds and ac-tivities. Courts-Martial for Men

An aftermath of the recent disturbances on the Mexican border is coming to light in reports reaching Washington of the court-martialing of soldiers charged with crossing the international boundary line.

A special order was issued when the troops were sent to the border country, forbidding officers and men, in uniform or in civilian clothes, and with or without arms, from crossing into Mexico. Reports from the Department of California indicate that most severe punishments are being infficted on those found guilty of violating the order. oundary line
